Social Creditors Select 31 of their Standard-Bearers

ADVISORY BOARD

The advisory board consists of the cabinet ministers, and is particularly always the same three—two directors of the Alberta Social Credit League and from seven to 12 party organizers. They met at Hamilton Hall Tuesday morning and at three daily, concluding their deliberations Thursday night. The board made final selection of one candidate from states of two or more named by constituencies.

As issued by Premier Abernethy contained several surprises.

Noable action of the advisory board was the dropping of C. H. Macdonald, member for Athabasca and the nomination in his place, Gordon Lee, who was nominated by the electoral district of Calgary.

On Mr. Rose's death, he contested the by-election and again won the seat. Mr. Lee, a resident of Calgary, was returning officer at the by-election at which Mr. Rose was elected.

RESIDING HERE

Of the five Edmonton candidates, Hon. Ernest C. Manning was elected for Calgary in the 1935 election and R. B. James was elected for the Acadia constituency which was abolished in the redistribution bill which goes into effect for this election. He has taken up his new residence here at 141st and 10th, and at his last annual meeting was elected president of the Edmonton Credit League.

Dr. W. B. Mullen, minister of agriculture, who was elected for Edmonton in the 1935 election, is in the campaign for the seat of Chester A. Bonning, provincial C.P. leader.

A new name in the list of provincial candidates is George Westlake, of Vegreville, who will represent the constituency of Westlake.

Mr. Westlake, who is a resident of Vegreville, has been in the constituency since which the seat has been vacated.

Another new name is Mrs. R. E. Wood, who is a resident of Plain, this constituency having been vacated by W. E. Rogers, Social Credit, who died last spring.

Since which the seat has been vacated, Mrs. Wood has been in the constituency since which the seat has been vacated.

Using redistribution two other names are noted affecting the names of the constituencies.

William Thomas, who is in the new constituency of Westlake, represented the now abolished Whitford constituency in the last house.

Mr. Thomas, who is a resident of Westlake, has been in the constituency since which the seat has been vacated.

Other provincial candidates are running in their old constituencies. In the Dominion field a newcomer is C. G. Gillies, in the constituency of Westlake.

He has been active in Social Credit circles.

In Vegreville A. Hrynka of Edmonton is a newcomer, representing the constituency of Westlake.

Mr. Hrynka, who is a resident of Vegreville, has been in the constituency since which the seat has been vacated.

FUEL POLICY PROPOSED BY TORY LEADER

Manion In South Makes Promise To Review Oil Problems

CALGARY, Feb. 23.—A national fuel policy under which distribution would be given to the use of Canadian oil and coal was proposed here last night by Hon. Ernest C. Manning.

His proposed national government would review completely the tax and freight structure affecting the oil industry here.

Mr. Manning said that it was to stimulating development of that industry.

He would also adopt a policy to make it easier for Canadian oil to reach all parts of the Dominion.

Mr. Manning announced the present government of strict control of oil at all times.

"I do not claim to be an authority on the oil industry, but I do know it is a national fuel policy so far as it is possible to work out one and I believe that during wartime a fuel policy for Canada is very much needed," he said.

He would not make "blind promises," he said, but would make every effort to aid utilization of the oil industry.

The present crisis may pass without incident, but if it does not, any country runs a great risk in remaining practically neutral.

BACON DEAL IS DEFENDED BY GARDINER

Facts Needed In Hog Production, Says Minister

WINGHAM, Ont., Feb. 23.—Those who wish to see the farmer in hog production and marketing would be well advised to get the true facts as to the situation, said Mr. J. C. Gardiner, minister of agriculture, said in an address here last night.

He said that the situation in the Canadian market for hogs in the United Kingdom being verified.

"I can not imagine any propaganda machine working anywhere during this war more consistently upon false facts than those who are trying to put a hog-hoax in the bacon agreement," said Mr. Gardiner.

Drift of Population to Great Towns Forcing Re-Planning in Britain

By FRED BACKHOUSE
Canadian Press Staff Writer
LONDON, Feb. 23.—National authorities are required to solve the grave problems created by the gradual but constant drift of the population to the great towns may lead to a drastically re-planned Britain at the end of the war.

Authorities here are envisaging a solution of problems resulting from the country's "chaotic, uncoordinated development," revealed in the report of the Royal Commission on the Distribution of the Industrial Population, in a scheme to divide Britain into 10 regional zones.

Each area would have a regional authority, with headquarters at London, Bristol, Liverpool, Manchester, Newcastle, Edinburgh or Glasgow.

The commission proposes the setting up of a national authority to deal with distribution of the industrial population.

By the present drift continues, the population will result in between one-third and one-half of the population of the country living within 25 miles of London.

It is recognized that there will be a movement of population to a big centre, but if 10 regional capitals are set up and properly developed, the drift will be spread over the whole country.

WAST ACTION NOW
Ministry of parliament and public bodies are expected to urge the government to deal with the problem of industrial drift, the heart of the war.

One suggestion is that a ministry of reconstruction, which would be like to be set up at once to anticipate post-war problems, might deal with this question of planning.

A recently report of the commission recommended the establishment of a new ministry under the cabinet minister to deal with the location of industry and also to plan the country for industrial, residential, agricultural and recreational requirements.

Some organizations seek to plan the country for industrial, residential, agricultural and recreational requirements.

PLEDGES BY CANDIDATES ARE ILLEGAL

Chief Electoral Officer Warns Nominates Against Signing

OTTAWA, Feb. 23.—Candidates in the coming Dominion election are warned of the serious consequences of signing pledges which would prevent their freedom of action in parliament, in a statement made public last night by Jules Castonguay, chief electoral officer.

The Electoral Act renders a candidate who signs such an undertaking liable to fine or imprisonment, if elected, Mr. Castonguay said.

The statement was issued because many complaints have come in that candidates in several electoral districts have been asked by persons or associations to pledge themselves to certain lines of conduct should they be elected.

Candidate

CHARLES CLAYS

STETTLET, Feb. 23.—Charles Clays, Liberal candidate for Canada federal constituency was born in Nebraska and came to Canada with his parents in 1902. He is still living on the homestead he filed on in the fall of 1902, which is 16 miles southeast of Stettlet and eight miles from Enkine.

He has a very vivid recollection of the pioneer days of this district when all supplies and necessities had to be brought in from Lacombe which was the nearest railway town. His farm consists of 1,000 acres of farm and grazing land and is well equipped with good buildings, stock and machinery. Mr. Clays pet hobby is the raising of purebred Hereford cattle. He has been in the business for the past twenty years and his stock is well known throughout the province. Secretary of the local school board for 33 years, he married Miss Josephine Welch, a teacher from Prince Rupert, B.C., in 1916. He is now a member of the board of trustees for the enlarged Stettlet school district No. 30.

Utmost In Quality "GALAN" TEA

Even Garbo Needs Aid To Stay Lovely

There comes a day in every woman's life when she cannot expect to create much of an impression with any such remark as "Oh, I don't have time to bother with diet," or "I don't believe in cream, you know."

If she is under thirty, fresh-faced as a daisy, and slender as a reed, remarks like this may go over. They may even be amusing. But after thirty, few and far between are women who should take this way, or, more importantly, think along these lines.

Even great beauties of the stage and screen don't pretend to be able to retain their youthful good looks without any effort in their part. Every actress dresses her hair to keep her figure in trim and supple, skin smooth and unlined, hair bright and young looking.

The latest story of a beautiful actress who doesn't expect to stay beautiful without effort is about Greta Garbo. On her recent visit to New York she put herself in the hands of a famous hair specialist, had special treatments for adjusting the muscles of her face, bought creams to be used at home and had a permanent wave.

Miss Garbo, lovely though she is, is undoubtedly realistic that unless a cream regularly and judiciously sensitive skin has a tendency to lose its freshness, become crepey and lined. Hereafter, she has figured that the amount of cream used each year in her part is necessary to counteract the effect added years have on any skin. Beauty treatments do require extra time, but it is time well spent. Mrs. Average Woman's appearance may be less important from a career point of view, but I doubt whether it is less important from practically every other standpoint.

Raising A Family

"Turn around, dear. Yes, you certainly look lovely. You have good time of the dance, and I hope you have more partners than you can use."

"Just watch me," laughed Mary, but down in her heart there was a certain uneasiness. Would she have a good time? Here she was, going to her first school dance with a crowd of girls and a crowd of boys, and she was alone. She was alone.

It was always "I'll be a girl, dear," when she was little and some wandering male of six or eight came into the yard.

O. R. Berton. Mary remembered the day when she opened at the corner and offered to carry her books. They met her mother just when the thirteen-year-old Mary was helping Mary through traffic, her eyes on boys and girls so young to walk together.

And then, Mary had reached the stage when boys were making her feel like a queen. Mother had decided that a select girl's school was the proper way to show off the lady.

Dorothy Dix Says:

When a girl is picking out a husband she rarely takes his occupation into consideration except to hope that it will bring in enough of the needed to provide her with a job as well, but otherwise it does not seem to her to matter whether he is a butcher or baker or candlestick maker.

Of course all men are housewolves, as the saying is, but women have naturally felt that the chief thing in a husband is a job, and that the occupation was the sign of the pay envelope it dragged down. The thing that counted was not how he made his money, but how much he made.

But the matter is not so simple as all that, for every wife who is her husband's helper and who has married her husband she married him for as well, and that her happiness depends just as much upon his getting along amicably with it as it does her staying on good terms with him.

Hence it is well for every girl contemplating matrimony to consider carefully the advantages and the drawbacks of the occupation of the gentleman who is to be her husband. And for her benefit I offer the following list:

Then, available for instance, few women can resist a uniform, and when one is married to a man who wears the most beautiful of them, his wife, but unless a girl has a man who is a professional, she should never marry a man who is a professional.

Also, being used to balancing profit and loss in his business, he does the same thing with his wife's pocket book, and does not mind there you are, girls, with men and their jobs. Take.

RENOVATIONS TO LIBRARIES ARE FINISHED

South Side Building Opens
Monday—Changes Cost
$1,000

Completely redecorated in light colors, with new lighting and new glass doors, the South Side Public Library will re-open for the use of its patrons on Monday, Feb. 23, being closed since February 13, it was announced last by Hugh C. Gourlay, librarian.

Mr. Gourlay last fall completed re-arrangement of book shelves and reading space in the North Side Library, and installed a new reference section.

The main floor of the South Side Library has its walls finished in olive green, with ivory ceiling and new built-in book shelves. New lighting has been installed in the book sections. Cost of the renovation is $1,000.

A new room has been installed for literature and the children's section is being decorated.

The South Side library has supplied books of fiction, science and other subjects to readers since March 14, 1913, when it was formally opened by Mayor J. Duigan, former mayor of Strathcona. Among its titles is an old uniform and cap worn by the "library guard" post held in 1913 by Arthur McEwen. There is no guard in libraries now.

TRUST FUND

The reading room on the North Side was opened March 13, 1913, but in 1922 the present North Side library was built with aid from the Carnegie Trust.

Members of the original library increased to 21,172 in 1929 from 19,275 in 1928. It was stated by Hugh C. Gourlay, librarian, in his first annual report.

Number of persons using books from the city's public libraries increased to 21,172 in 1929 from 19,275 in 1928. It was stated by Hugh C. Gourlay, librarian, in his first annual report.

He stated that there was a notable increase in the use of the juvenile section of the library. The number of volumes on the library shelves is 102,847 and there were 7,100 books added during the year.

Piction led in popularity, with 54,132 books being circulated as against 42,173 non-fiction.

Hugh Gourlay and Miss Margaret Allright resigned during the year. Miss Allright has been in attendance for a year to study library science at McGill university in Montreal and will return this summer.

Saving Your Eyes Against Civilization

By Jackson Bros. Optometrist

Did you ever stop to realize the fact that all human beings young and old living in this modern age of ours, during their waking hours, are continually drawing upon their eyes for their safety, and guidance, as well as their pleasure?

Supposing some one blindfolded you and started you across a busy intersection of a busy city, what would you feel like? This example is just to give you an idea of the tremendous importance every human being places on their eyes, yet give them such little thought.

First man, or first woman, modern man or modern woman, all of us today face a civilization that places a severe burden upon them in their most precious organs in their eyes.

CATTLE BUYER IS SUED FOR MISHAP DAMAGE

Arising out of a motor accident on N. 1 Highway near Leduc on November 21 last, two statements of claim were filed in Supreme Court, Friday morning, claiming damages from Fred Sierren, Edmonton cattle buyer.

Sierren's car was in collision with one driven by Mrs. Lettie M. Langrock, wife of a Lacombe farmer, and her husband who owned the car, and their daughter Lorraine were passengers at the time. Mrs. Langrock received chest injuries and Miss Lorraine lost her front teeth and cheek cut and her spectacles broken.

Claiming that Sierren was driving recklessly on the wrong side of the road, and that his brakes were defective, claim is made by Mr. and Mrs. Langrock for $354 special damages and $10,000 general damages, with a further claim on behalf of Miss Langrock for $2150 special damages and $300 general damages. Mr. J. S. McCormick is acting for the plaintiffs in both suits.

Through The Mill

The guy owed a rent bill, see and he skipped out without paying it. So the landlord who is a tough boss gets the cops after him. Finally they catch up with him near Edmonton and he is using another name. So they haul him into police court and charge him with obtaining money by false pretenses, claiming when he appears Friday that he left enough clothes behind to more than settle the 12-buck bill he owed. But the cops insist it is him for 15 bucks and $750 costs. And if he doesn't fork over he goes down the river for 31 days.

THE ANSWERS

DONALD DEWAR, Macdonald Hotel: I think it would be a very good one. I have never been a subscriber to the idea of buying stars and even stars for autographs and I think the proceeds should be much more effective if they were reserved.

ROBERT MCGRATH, Labor and Community Service worker: I'm all for the idea of celebrities for autographs from the public. It is the public that makes the stars.

BLANCHE HAWKINS, newspaper editor: I like the idea of autographs. While perhaps the stars owe their all to the public yet we of the public have favorites of various walks of life and to those who look up to them and admire them for their achievements in music, literature, art, athletics, politics or any other calling, collection of autographs appeals.

GEORGE HOLLOWAY, clerk: Personally, autograph collecting does not make a bit with me. I am an objector who the public should not obtain stars' autographs if they want them and while the stars may not have to go to the trouble of making autographs, they can't help but go for bouquets.

GEORGE HOLLOWAY, clerk: Personally, autograph collecting does not make a bit with me. I am an objector who the public should not obtain stars' autographs if they want them and while the stars may not have to go to the trouble of making autographs, they can't help but go for bouquets.

BLANCHE HAWKINS, newspaper editor: I like the idea of autographs. While perhaps the stars owe their all to the public yet we of the public have favorites of various walks of life and to those who look up to them and admire them for their achievements in music, literature, art, athletics, politics or any other calling, collection of autographs appeals.

$15 A WEEK — By Louise Holmes

CAST OF CHARACTERS
ANN BROWN, orphan daughter of a gambler, alone in an untidy city.
PAUL HAYDEN, stock room boy with ambitions.
STEVE CLAYBURN, wealthy playboy.
CLARA BROOKS, dime store counter girl.
IRENE TRIMPLE, society debutante.

Yesterday, Ann wrote her answer to "Lover" but does not yet mail it. At work, she discusses her prospects with Mrs. Pringle, owner of the shop. Ann feels she is caught in the $15 a week class—a class without a future. At noon she hurries to the dime store to buy things for a new dress. The friendly clerk remarks at the rapid change between Ann and debutante Irene Trimple.

CHAPTER III
THE 10-cent store girl continued to compare the pictured likeness of Irene Trimple, debutante with the equally lovely face of Ann Brown, $15 assistant to Mrs. Pringle. "Yes sir," she kept saying. "Uh-huh."
"Let me see," Ann examined the newspaper clipping. "Oh, I don't think so," she said.
"I saw it plain as anything at first. Yeah, I like the dress fine. You can wear that kind. Me, I'm too fat."
Ann paid for her purchases and left the store. She walked up one side of State street and down the other, looking into windows, expertly noting styles and trends, adapting them to her own user mind was divided. Half of it reacted to the stunning displays, the other half played with the thought of K285.

Should she mail her letter? She had not signed her own name, it could never do her harm—she couldn't answer a second letter if the refined gentleman wrote again. It was exciting, something to think about.
Even among the crowds on the streets, Ann felt isolated, alone. She paused on the library steps, watched the passing throng. Surely among all of those people there should be one friendly face. She returned to the library on the hour. She waited on several customers during the afternoon and delivered a number of packages. Ann was acquiring a following and Mrs. Pringle warmly gave her a free hand. It was after 4 when the $15-a-week subject came up again. Ann said something complimentary about Mrs. Pringle's success in having a shop of her own. "I might better have stayed where I was, times like they are," the older woman said. "I was sure of steady pay there. How much do you think this shop cleared last year?"

"You needn't tell me it—"
"I don't mind," it amounted to less than $80 a month.
"That's not an good, but it's not a bad thing," she said. "Yes, I have done. She spoke wearily. When I married him 30 years ago he was desperate for the Bon Ton cleaners. He's still delivering for them at $120."
Ann frowned. "Then you can't get out," she said, as if it were her own. "Most of us stay where we are," Mrs. Pringle admitted.

Ann went home on a crowded El train. She hurried through a slushy slush and packed the dull blue material, the 10-cent store findings and a pair of slippers in a cardboard box. It was early when she started for the Centre. One reason why Ann lived in that particular neighborhood was because of the proximity to the Centre. It was a community house and offered many advantages to the ambitious, among them a new room. For 25 cents a sitting room you could use the electric sewing machine, the bellows, the cutting and fitting by Lola, a veteran seamstress.

Ann found a table in the sewing room and, with the picture of Irene Trimple in front of her, cut into the blue material. She scoffed at patterns; they required another too much patience for her. Managing to get the dress out of the short length of blue, she fingered and pinched, placing where seams would go unnoticed, she surprised and basted.

She glanced at the picture and looked again. "For a minute I thought it was a picture of you, Miss Brown," she said.

Ann laughed. "You can't exactly see the set of Chicago's most popular debut, can you?"
"I'll go this far," Lola said. "If you've finished. Never in all my experience have I seen a girl with your ability for making clothes—so for wearing them."
"Thank you," Ann said. "I could capitalize on my technique."
Lola pursed her lips. "Skill is cheap these days. You're lucky to have a job." She fingered the blue material. "You've got a nice piece of merchandise here. I make up lovely." Another patron cried out that she had put in a new dress and to Lola hurried away.

Ann worked fast. She said slight attention to the conversation that rippled under the hum of sewing machines. She had anticipated making friends at the Centre, but had been disappointed. Girls came, usually in groups. They made one garment each and seldom came again.

Slitting away, Ann thought about it. Odd, the impossibility of making friends. Attending church had proved equally unsatisfactory. A white-haired man always stood Ann's hand when she entered. He led her to a pew. He mentioned the weather. The minister shook her hand when the service was over. That was all. Perhaps she had chosen too large a church. It was the only one within walking distance of her home. The budget wouldn't give an inch on extra carfare.

Ann's mind fluttered about. The letter to K285—it still rested in her hand.
